The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde

Chapters 1-4 Review
• Enfield and Utterson go for a walk as is their Sunday custom. They happen past a door that prompts Enfield to tell Utterson a story about that door involving a man by the name of Hyde that occurred late one night.

• Enfield doesn’t know at the time, but Utterson has already heard the story.

• We learn that Hyde is a shady fellow that gives the appearance of deformity.
Chapter 2 – The Search for Mr. Hyde

• Utterson is deeply concerned with what he has heard.

• He as in his possession a will from Dr. Henry Jekyll that names Hyde as the sole beneficiary.

• He is convinced it is blackmail as Jekyll was much wilder in his youth and may have skeletons in his closet.

• Utterson decides he will prowl around “Blackmail House” and seek out Mr. Hyde. Hehehe.
Chapter 3 – Dr. Jekyll was Quite at Ease

• Deeply dismayed, Utterson visits his friend and client Dr. Jekyll to get to the bottom of the Hyde business.

• Jekyll assures Utterson that he is not concerned with Hyde and has a great curiosity for the man.

• He claims he can be rid of him at any point he chooses.
• Sir Danvers Carew, a well-to-do gentleman, is brutally murdered late one night a year following the events of chapter 3.

• Various evidence is found to indicate that Hyde is the murderer, including an eye witness to the crime.

• The investigation heads towards a shady section of London called SoHo where Hyde is known to have an apartment.
